FOUR KILLED, MANY HURT IN COLLISION

Two Sections of Scottish Express in Terrific Smash At Bletchley

OTHERS FEARED DEAD IN DEBRIS OF STATION

LONDON, Oct. 14 (P).—Steel-helmeted air raid precaution forces went into action today at Bletchley, forty-five miles northwest of London, where England's first serious train wreck during the wartime blackout killed at least four persons, injured twenty-four others, and made the railway station look as if it had been struck by a bomb.

In a heavy rain two sections of the Scottish express from London collided last evening at Bletchley Station. Among the passengers were many soldiers, sailors and Royal Air Force men.

Rescuers worked in pouring rain, amid smoke and steam, by dim blue lights, until authorities lifted blackout restrictions in the vicinity of the wreck.

OTHERS FEARED DEAD
Those killed were believed to have been the engineer and the fireman of a switch engine, an R.A.F. man and another passenger. It was feared, however, other bodies would be found in the wreckage.

The locomotive skidded off the rails and smashed into the wall of the darkened station restaurant and waiting-room. Splinters and flying glass injured some of the persons waiting for trains.

England's blackout has resulted in an alarming jump in casualties among pedestrians and motorists. Twelve persons were injured last night in a collision between a bus and a car near the Chancery Lane subway station.

SEEKS FASTER MAIL SERVICE

Ottawa Attempting to Minimize Delays in Delivery From Britain

(Special to The Colonist)
OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—Every effort was being made to minimize delays in the mail service, first class and otherwise, between Canada and Great Britain and the United States, as the war gradually but steadily improved. Postoffice Department officials said tonight.

"The delays in the arrival of mails from Great Britain are a repetition of what occurred at the beginning of the Great War," headquarters declared. "As the war went on, these delays were circumvented to a marked degree. Inundated as we are with protests from all parts of Canada at the delays in arrival of British mails, we are now doing all we can to meet the situation, and there will be a gradual but very steady improvement in the service."

CAUSES FOR DELAYS
"There are three causes for the present delays: the impossibility of knowing definitely when boats are to sail or arrive, the operation of the convoy system and the general war disturbance of Atlantic shipping."

Publication of sailing dates is not permitted beforehand, and sailings often are delayed for two and three days, sometimes a week or even more, the department explained. Often sailings have to be held up several days until a convoy could be arranged; while the time for crossings was lengthened when it became advisable for ships to alter their courses on the high seas.

"We have switched several shipments of mail from Montreal to New York to make faster time the moment we found out a boat was leaving there," headquarters stated. "On the other side of the Atlantic, the British authorities likewise are doing their utmost to speed up the service."

QUEEN INSPECTS TRAIN

LONDON, Oct. 13 (P).—Queen Elizabeth today inspected one of a fleet of newly-built hospital trains that are being held in readiness to take persons wounded in possible air raids to rural base hospitals.

ITALY WILL KEEP ALOOF

Fascists Say Country Making No Move for Either Peace or War

ROME, Oct. 13 (P).—Government circles indicated tonight Italy would keep aloof from any effort by Adolf Hitler to obtain Italian aid for extending the war now that peace hopes are dimmer.

Without committing the Government to any definite position, in advance of diplomatic consultations expected to follow Prime Minister Chamberlain's rejection of Hitler's peace plans, authoritative Fascists said Italy's attitude remained that of making no move—either militarily or for peace.

(Informed quarters in Berlin said Germany already had begun consultations with Italy and Russia.)
If a peace move with a definite basis that appeared to have possibilities for success were advanced, however, the opinion was widespread that Italy would participate.

The German Government was expected to consult separately with Italy and Soviet Russia, in accordance with consultative pacts, but Italians said there would be no Italian-Russian conferences, inasmuch as there were no such agreements between Rome and Moscow.

The Fascist press charged Great Britain and France for not having declared war on Russia because of her Baltic expansion.

Gathered from Dagenham and other towns in Essex, they were seen off in their buses from Lowestoft. A search of the countryside has failed to locate them. Perplexed billeting officers said they'd heard a "vague rumor" that some of the seventy children wound up in the middle of Norfolk.

British Army Ready Confidently Waiting To Meet Any Move

Highly-Mechanized Force Continuously Moving Toward the Front in France—Morale High With Absence of 'Professionalism' Evident

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 12 (Delayed) Passed by Field Censor (P).—The British army, young, eager and confident, crouched along its sector of the Western Front, a front on which there is "nothing doing," but which at any day may be hit by the first German attack.

There are 158,000 British troops now on French soil. While the guns are silent, this highly-mechanized force continues to pour troops, munitions and supplies toward the front.

Kings Invited by Sweden to Hold War Conference

Heads of Denmark, Norway and Finland Asked To Meet in Stockholm on Wednesday Next—Invitation Greeted by Finns With Enthusiasm—Second Moscow Talk Postponed

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 13 (P).—Sweden today invited the Kings of Denmark and Norway and the President of Finland to confer here next Wednesday on their countries' status in the war and at the same time ordered strengthening of the long-friendly border between Sweden and Finland.

OFFICERS MUST WIN PROMOTION

British Army Made Truly Democratic by War Secretary Hore-Belisha

LONDON, Oct. 13 (P).—The army has gone democratic under Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's traditional-shattering Secretary of State for War, who believed the "old school tie" should be used to enhance a neck-and-not-to-gain social advantages.

In this war Britain intends recruiting the great bulk of her officers from the ranks, which is like saying the House of Lords will be used as a workman's club.

The War Office already has nailed up the doors of Woolwich and Sandhurst, the exclusive military schools. A highly-placed officer said today: "This is going to be an army in which a go-ahead young man can get along."

"We want leaders who are active minded," he said. "We are determined our fighting troops will be commanded by young officers. We mean to get the ages down. In the last war some of our best battalion commanders were youngsters of twenty-four, but unfortunately we did not have them until the end." Commanding officers have been asked by the War Office to search the ranks for likely looking soldiers who will be sent to a cadet battalion, where they will be given several months' training before graduating as officers.

Not Adopting Bullet-Proof Armor Suits

LONDON, Oct. 13 (P).—The Press Association military correspondent said tonight reports that some German shock troops had been equipped with bullet-proof duralumin "suits of armor" have not impressed Allied commanders in the least.

The correspondent said no personal "armor" in addition to the regulation steel helmet will be given British troops. He pointed out that even the heavy plating of tanks can be perforated by anti-tank projectiles.

FIRST MEDAL IS AWARDED

Private Bert Short Wins High Honor for Gallant Service

LONDON, Oct. 13 (P).—The first military medal of the second Great War was awarded tonight to Private Bert Short.

An official announcement said merely that the medal "for gallant service in recent operations" had been awarded to him. No further details were given.

The O.B.E. will be conferred on Radio Operator J. G. M. Turner for attempting to rescue two wounded Lascars crewmen under heavy shell fire, the same announcement said.

The Lascars, members of the crew of the torpedoed vessel Manara, were left behind after the rest of the crew got away. Turner carried them to the rail, then lowered a lifeboat which was swamped. He thereupon lowered a second boat, after placing the most seriously wounded Lascar in it. But a shell blew it to pieces.

Undaunted, the radio operator dived overboard and towed the waterlogged first boat alongside. He lowered the second seaman into it and towed it to the cheering sailors, who were in the other boats nearby.

Captured Liner Well Disguised

LONDON, Oct. 13 (P).—The Admiralty announced today through the Ministry of Information that when the 13,615-ton German liner Cap Norte was captured in the South Atlantic, it had been completely repainted.

The name "Ancona" had been substituted for its own name on the hull. A Swedish flag had also been pointed on its side.

BREAKERS CAUSE LOSSES IN SOUTH

Houses Damaged by Seas in Los Angeles District—Temperatures in Nineties

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13 (P).—High tides and heat continued to plague the Los Angeles area today, although the maximum temperature here of 95 was one degree lower than yesterday's top.

Houses in the Belmont Shore and Alhambra districts, damaged during the September storm, took further battering today from turbulent seas. Breakers swept entirely across the peninsula in places and undermined the Pacific Electric tracks to Seal Beach, halting interurban cars.

Rainbow Pier at Long Beach was closed to traffic, as heavy waves swept over the half-moon structure. Four persons caught in ripides on Play del Ray were rescued.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN HAVE BENEFACTORS

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13 (P).—John Russell, president of the Crippled Children's Hospital here, probably has as much faith in Santa Claus as the kiddies under his care.

Today a mysterious stranger, who three months ago entered the institution and handed him $1,500, returned and gave him $500, with the remark "there may be more from the same place later."

Last week two other unidentified benefactors entered the hospital and each left $500.

THREE GERMAN SUBMARINES SUNK IN DAY BY ROYAL NAVY

BRITISH WARSHIP IS SUNK

LONDON, Oct. 14 (Saturday, 2:30 a.m., P.S.T.) (P).—The British Admiralty announced today the battleship Royal Oak had been sunk. The following statement was issued by the Secretary of the Admiralty:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H.M.S. Royal Oak is sunk, it is believed by U-boat action."

"The 29,150-ton battleship normally carried from 1,009 to 1,046 men. A list of the survivors will be announced as soon as possible," the Admiralty statement said.

The Royal Oak was the first of five battleships of the Royal Sovereign class, built from 1914 to 1916 and cost more than $10,000,000.

CALM PREVAILS IN WAR SECTOR

Western Front Generally Quiet—French Aviator Downs Three Planes

PARIS, Oct. 13 (P).—A sudden calm prevailed over the northern flank of the Western Front tonight after five days of repeated German attacks, which were successively checked by the French forces.

The German attacks, which have been increasing in strength, halted abruptly yesterday, the French reported. Suspicions were aroused because the Germans had attacked during bad weather then suddenly let up as skies cleared over the Western Front.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER
After one day of clear, crisp early winter weather and one moonlight night, the weather in the fighting zone turned unfavorable again this evening, but there was no resumption of German activity as on the previous scale.

Tonight's army communique said that several German reconnaissance parties south of Pirmasens had been forced to withdraw without achieving any results.

BAGS THREE PLANES
French dispatches said one French pilot several days ago shot down three German Messerschmitt planes in a single combat. The young pilot, flying alone high above the German lines, dispatched, spotted three Messerschmitts near Saarbrücken. Diving, the pilot spattered one German plane with bullets at a distance of only fifty yards, the dispatch said. Moments later two others were brought down in the combat.

Germany Consulting Russia and Italy on Plans for War Aid

Nazis Indignant at Rejection of Hitler's Proposals To End War—Believe the United States Could Promote Peace Conference

BERLIN, Oct. 13 (P).—Germany was reported to have begun consultations tonight with two of her pact partners, Soviet Russia and Italy, as a preliminary to her next major move in the war.

Informed quarters said the exchange of views with Moscow and Rome were being carried out through the German Ambassadors in the two capitals.

Indignation over Prime Minister Chamberlain's rejection of Hitler's proposals for ending the war on Germany's terms—acceptance of the disappearance of Poland—except through Nazi ranks, said Mr. Chamberlain had "rejected the hand of peace stretched out to him by the Fuehrer," and that Britain's war aims meant "war against the German people, war against the German Reich unto annihilation."

But officials, nevertheless, expressed a hope some neutral power, such as the United States, "in her own interest" would bring pressure on Britain to accept a peace conference as the Fuehrer suggested in his Reichstag speech just a week ago.

A communique of the Army High Command said the French yesterday blew up three German-built bridges over the Rhine.

From assertions in official quarters it appeared that such action would not be seized upon as a signal for heavy retaliation, although Germany, it was said, "has not been neutral power."

Admiralty Announces Rescue of Some Survivors—Troops in France Await With Confidence Any Attack—Exception Taken to American Republics Defining Neutrality Zone

Expeditionary Force to Be Increased in Size Steadily

LONDON, Oct. 13 (CP).—Flashing guns and bursting depth charges of the Royal Navy today sent three German submarines to the bottom of the sea, their hulls shattered, their raiding days over. It was the biggest day's haul of the war.

The Admiralty announced the successes while the British Expeditionary Force in France was described as awaiting with French troops "in complete confidence" any attack Adolf Hitler may launch in the West.

The twin announcement reinforced the view of military authorities here that Germany has been the decisive loser of round one of the second Great War—losing on land, sea and air, and along the vitally important diplomatic front.

MANY DIVISIONS IN POLAND

On the diplomatic front it is argued here that Germany has lost out to Russia both in the Baltic, now Soviet-dominated, and in Southeastern Europe. Although the smashing of the Polish republic is a German success, it immobilizes twenty to twenty-five divisions of first line troops who are needed to watch the Russians and to try to subjugate the Poles.

Other points where Germany has lost, it was affirmed, are that French troops are on her soil; that her submarine menace has been beaten off, and that the bombing plane has not proven its ability to destroy the battleship.

The last figure given on submarine warfare was on September 20 when Prime Minister Chamberlain gave Parliament a conservative estimate that "six or seven" submarines had been destroyed.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told Parliament six days later that "since then we have had some fruitful days," but did not give any figures. In addition, a number of submarines have been destroyed by the French navy.

AMERICAN REPUBLICS' NEUTRALITY

The Admiralty also went on record as taking exception to the American republics' right to draw a line around all the Americas except Canada within which belligerent action would be forbidden. Whether this would be respected remained for the belligerents to decide, the Admiralty said.

A communique on the submarine sinkings said that "Friday the Thirteenth of October has proved an unlucky day for the U-boats, two having been destroyed." The communique added that the hunting craft were able to rescue "some survivors."

Shortly after the first two sinkings were announced the Admiralty issued a second communique which said: "With reference to the previous communique, the Admiralty states that information has just been received of the destruction of a third U-boat on Friday, October 13. In this case also the hunting craft were able to rescue a few survivors."

The announcements came at a time when the American liner President Harding was reporting the rescue of thirty-six crew members from the sunken British freighter Heronspool.

Great Britain claimed the "first round of the war" against Germany with the successful transportation of the expeditionary force of 158,000 men to France and declared "we await attack in complete confidence."

Expect Pact To Control Dardanelles

MOSCOW, Oct. 13 (P).—A Russian-Turkish agreement on control of the Black Sea and the Dardanelles was reported imminent tonight as the Kremlin postponed further talks with Finland to confer with the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu.

Observers believed Russia and Turkey would define after their mutual attitudes in the war, perhaps in a pact, signature of which would take place in a day or two.

RECRUITING DONE IN UNIFORM ONLY

None but Authorized Officers Have Authority to Enlist Men for Active Service

OTTAWA, Oct. 13 (P).—The National Defence Department said in a statement tonight no one has authority to enlist men for the Canadian active service force except authorized recruiting officers, who will always be in uniform while on recruiting duty.

The statement said the department's attention has been drawn to activities of unauthorized persons in Quebec province with respect to recruiting for the C.A.S.F.

The department said enlistment is entirely voluntary throughout Canada, and that "anyone purporting to be a recruiting officer is liable to heavy penalties."

Denies Increase in Butter and Cheese Prices Is Abnormal

Federal Minister of Agriculture Says Charges of Profiteering Unfounded—Declares Values At Levels of Last Two Years

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Oct. 13 (C.P.)—It is difficult for anyone connected with agriculture to understand charges of profiteering because of increases in butter and cheese prices since the war began, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, said tonight in a banquet address here.

"As a matter of fact, the average yearly butter jobbing prices for 1922 to 1929, when there was no war, ran from 25 to 39 cents a pound at Montreal and cheese averages from 17 to 21 cents a pound on the same market during the same period," Mr. Gardiner said.

"I think it important that we place these facts on record now so that we may not be making comparisons with unreasonable prices for farm products caused by war fear when speaking of profiteering through rises in prices."

THOUSANDS SEE MATCHES
Mr. Gardiner spoke to the banquet tendered by the city of Brockville to participants in the international ploughing match, under auspices of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association. More than 15,000 persons attended the matches today.

By reason of proximity to the British market, Canada could do the largest share of any of the Dominions in aiding the struggle for democracy, said Mr. Gardiner, and he felt sure Canadian farmers would push food supplies forward.

"I do not think price is your first consideration," he said.

Canada's general agricultural production is what is most necessary as a war aid to the Allies, said Mr. Gardiner, and there need be no basic changes in Canada's agricultural economy.

"You will serve Canada and the Empire best by doing well what you have been doing ever since you started to farm," he said.

The minister recalled that a year ago he attributed low prices for farm products to the general world fear of war. Today the war has come, Canada has joined with Britain and France "in what may turn out to be the greatest death struggle of all time."

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION
Cereals, meat and meat fats, dairy products and fruit in certain processed forms were expected from Canada by the Allies in great volume," Mr. Gardiner said.

When the war started cheese was 10 to 11 cents a pound and butter from 20 to 22 cents, he continued. Butter has risen to 28 cents and cheese to 14 cents, these prices being approximately the same as those received in the low-price summer season of 1928.

Prices were only now back to the average level of 1927 and 1928, the minister pointed out.

Europe's preparation for war by home and the consequent obstructions placed in the way of imports were the chief reasons for low prices, Mr. Gardiner asserted. Today countries at a great distance from Europe were rushing supplies there in fear the war would close trade routes and there was further dislocation of the market, he said.

Two Governors Reappointed to Board of U.B.C.

Mr. Justice Denis Murphy and J. B. Clearbue, K.C., have been reappointed to the board of governors of the University of British Columbia. Premier Pattullo announced yesterday, after the final executive meeting of the Cabinet for the week. The appointment is for six years.

directly or indirectly for the national defence. Crews of volunteer workers already were going through the city clearing attics and alleys of inflammable materials as a precaution against air raids.

CONFERENCE POSTPONED
The second of the Soviet Russian-Finnish conferences in Moscow was postponed today, and observers were still without clues as to the nature of the proposals the U.S.S.R. may have made.

Kallio's addition of two members to the Cabinet increased the Government's parliamentary majority through their followers from 145 to 153 out of 196 seats.

Dr. J. O. Soederhjelm, Helsinki attorney, succeeding E. E. Rautavaara, and Ernst von Born, second vice-chairman of the Diet (parliament), was named minister without portfolio.

The Swedish King's invitation was welcomed as further evidence of the solidarity of the Northern European states.

The three parties which hitherto stood behind the present Finnish Government in the Diet were the Social Democrats with eighty-three representatives, the Agrarians with fifty-six and the Progressives with six.

Naming of two members of the Swedish party to the Cabinet assured the support of eighteen representatives of that party.

their enjoyment of certain well-established rights."

ADMIRALTY STATEMENT

An Admiralty statement said:

"It is understood the zone is in no way intended as an extension of territorial waters, but belligerents are to be invited to accept the limitation of their operations."

This is clearly the wisest way of proceeding since while belligerents and particularly the Allies may be anxious to assist all neutral countries in keeping war from the proximity of their coasts, it must be for them to decide whether or not to accept restrictions which would limit their enjoyment of certain well-established rights."

The military expert hinted that Great Britain and France intend to fight and let Germany launch the big offensive if one is to be launched this winter.

"It is very late now for an attack," he said. "The weather is against the movement of big masses of troops and any day the weather may make impossible the low-flying bombing attacks Germany used so successfully in Poland. If an attack comes now it will mean that Hitler does not dare wait until spring. But we can wait and the weather is in our favor."

It was brought out also that Great Britain is concentrating on a carefully trained army of "rather young men—active-minded men"; that the first conscripts called up on July 1 have "trained more quickly than we thought possible," and that troops are still moving to France in "small streams."

With reference to Russia's move in the Baltic the military expert asserted:

"We have never penetrated the Baltic, that was Germany's sphere. Now the Baltic is dominated by Russia. We do regard the Mediterranean as our sphere, however, and we have not been threatened there."

He continued that "guerrilla fighting" in Poland was predicted.

The general turned embarrassing questions into laughs. One brass band inquired the position of the British Expeditionary Forces in France. The expert grinned. "Hitler would like to know," he said.

MAJOR JOB COMPLETED

The War Office spokesman indicated the major transportation job of moving troops was completed, although he said British troops would continue to go to France.

The War Office spokesman discussed three possibilities which the troops may have to face—a German attack on the Maginot Line, an attack through Belgium or a flanking movement through The Netherlands and then Belgium.

WELCOMED IN FINLAND

HELSINKI, Oct. 13 (C.P.)—Finland greeted with enthusiasm today news that Sweden had called a conference of Northern European states, while President Kyyroli, working for preservation of Finnish neutrality and independence, broadened the makeup of his Cabinet.

The President by decree also ordered Finnish civilians to hold themselves ready for non-military pursuits if required by the present emergency. Regulations providing for wartime emergencies were put into effect by the decree. All citizens may be required to work

Official quarters in Sweden were optimistic regarding chances for a peaceful outcome of the Russian-Finnish negotiations. On the basis of information available here they expressed belief that Russia would not go beyond demands for control of three small islands in the Finnish Gulf and a guarantee that the Åland Islands, at the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia, would not be fortified.

ACCOUNTING FIRM NAMED

Provincial Government Continues With Plan of Utility Appraisal

Continuing with provincial plans for the regulation of public utilities, the British Columbia Government yesterday named George A. Touche & Company, a firm of chartered accountants, as accountants to the Public Utilities Commission.

In making the announcement, Premier Pattullo said the firm would work with the board in connection with a survey of hydro-electric rates.

Meanwhile, Dr. W. A. Carrothers, chairman of the board, said the utilities commission was proceeding with a survey of British Columbia Electric Railway operations, upon which S. R. Weston, the board's consultant engineer, has been at work for two months.

The accountants would work in conjunction with the appraisal and statistical side of that survey, it was indicated.

Utility experts have been brought out from the United States and are going over the company's operations in consultation with officials of the commission, Dr. Carrothers said.

MAY AMEND LAW

Irrespective of this inquiry, the Public Utilities Commission is expected to seek amending legislation at the coming session in connection with appraisal of their rates.

Passed last year, the provincial statute conflicted with some existing laws, and omitted necessary provisions at other points. It has been contended by members of the commission.

Between sessions, the commission has taken over the licensing work of the former Highway Traffic Commission, and its staffs. Control of water and other rights, however, remain to be worked out, some duplication existing with the scope of present provincial statutes.

To cure these and other defects, amending legislation has been forecast, and is now anticipated.

TEACHERS MEET IN CONVENTION

Sectional Discussions Feature First Day's Deliberations at Nanaimo

NANAIMO, Oct. 13.—Two hundred and fifty teachers of Central and Northern Vancouver Island, in districts between Cobble Hill and Campbell River, are assembled here for their annual convention.

At meetings held today the subject of calling off the convention because of the present crisis was raised and discussed at length. After consideration it was decided that education was more necessary in these days than at any other time and that the convention should continue as planned.

Sectional meetings took place in the Thomas Hodgson School, with Miss T. C. Rendle, of Toulon, presiding, and Miss M. Peck, of Vancouver, leading the discussion. Miss M. E. Colman, Vancouver, gave an address on "The Book and the Child."

Mr. Laura Johnson and Dr. W. H. Huddleston were adviser and inspector of the intermediate section, and Miss E. Unsworth, Vancouver, spoke on "Teaching the Subnormal Child."

Chairman and adviser leading the discussions of groups were: Junior high section, T. E. Bennett, Alberni; and W. Gray, North Vancouver; senior high, E. J. Costin, and Dr. N. F. Black, Vancouver; rural section, G. A. Galliford and G. H. Gower; technical section chairman and adviser, F. Fairley and W. W. Huddleston; home economics, Miss DeJong and Miss I. Green, Vancouver.

Resolutions arising out of today's discussion were handed to the resolutions committee to be dealt with at the annual meeting tomorrow.

The chief speaker at the annual banquet tonight, attended by 200 persons, was Dr. F. Black, Vancouver, on the objective of teachers' organizations. He stressed the importance of the careful selection of the personnel of the teaching profession. RESTRICTIONS TO BE RELAXED

Ban on Horse Imports Lifted If Health Certificates Produced

Restrictions against the importation into British Columbia of horses from outside points where equine encephalomyelitis has been reported in recent years will be relaxed after October 15, according to a statement issued by Hon. K. C. MacDonald, Minister of Agriculture.

It will still be necessary for intending settlers or importers to submit with their applications permit certificates showing that their horses have been vaccinated against sleeping sickness during the current season.

Transportation companies will carry horses into this province only when permit issued by the Department of Agriculture is presented at point of shipment or shown to police officers at point of entry.

Sleeping sickness of horses does not commonly appear after cold weather has set in. As a result of the policy of restricting horse importations during summer and permitting importations only on permit certificates of vaccination it is hoped that the scourge, which in 1928 decimated the horse population in other provinces and states, may be excluded from British Columbia farms.

During the present year thousands of horses in this province have been vaccinated and departmental veterinarians state that no outbreak of the disease has been reported this season. Efforts are being continued to safeguard the health of farm horses, and to this end the requiring of vaccination certificates and the importation of horses on permit will be continued, the minister stated.

Over sixty lagers have already volunteered their assistance for the day on Saturday, October 28. It was reported by the Canadian Friends of China. Appreciation of The Daily Times in donating several copies for use in the publications was voiced by the promotion committee.

FLOATED AT HIGH WATER

Princess Adelaide Will Be Towed Here by the Salvage King

The Princess Adelaide, of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's British Columbia Coast Service, which went ashore at Port McNeill on Thursday in a heavy fog, floated free shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning, according to a dispatch received by Captain R. W. McMurray, manager of the service. Damage was confined to the rudder.

The Adelaide was backing away from the Port McNeill wharf when she ran ashore stern first. It was high water at the time and she had to remain fast until the tide came up again and released her. About fifty travelers were aboard, but suffered no inconvenience. They were taken to Alert Bay yesterday, where they were to await the arrival of the Union Steamship's coastal vessel Catala, which left Vancouver last night for Northern British Columbia. The Pacific Salvage Company's Ss. Salvage King left here Thursday evening and was due at Port McNeill yesterday afternoon. The Salvage King will tow the Princess Adelaide south for repairs. Aboard the Salvage King when she left Victoria was Captain Thomas Rippon, Vancouver, marine superintendent of the British Columbia Coast Service.

Gunnery Practice Will Be Carried Out This Morning

EXPORT MAINTAINED

Lumber shipments from British Columbia were maintained at record levels in September, with 143,829,791 feet going to all markets, an increase of approximately 600,000 feet over the total for August.

There was a slight decline to 114,222,791 feet to the United Kingdom, but exporters are more than satisfied with the showing in view of the troubled international situation. United Kingdom imports for the month of September were well above the monthly average of about 80,000,000 feet for the first eight months of the year.

An indication of the confidence of logging operators in the immediate future is given by the fact that the price list of fir logs has been raised to $12, $17 and $24, compared with sales made during September at $9, $14, $19, to $10.50, $15.50 and $21.50.

Log stocks are high at present and it is expected that they will further increase until the end of the year due to the majority of camps now being in operation. Fears of cessation of business that have been dispelled, and confirmation that shipments will be continued has created confidence in buying.

Worked Way to England on Freighter

Eager to get into the Royal Air Force, three young Vancouver Islanders left here late in July aboard a Yugoslav freighter for England. Putting into a neutral port when war was declared, the ship remained there until a convoy could be arranged. The lads are now in England wearing the uniform of the Royal Air Force. Two of the boys are pictured with Captain Seymour-Biggs and the chief officer of the ship. Left to right, John Uzell, Cowichan; Captain Seymour-Biggs; W. D. Keith, Duncan, and the first officer, Ted Meredith, Victoria, the third lad, was not present when the picture was taken.

MISSION BOAT GOES AGROUND

Five Passengers Forced to Spend Night Ashore in Drenching Rain

JUNEAU, Alaska, Oct. 13 (AP)—A Presbyterian mission boat ran aground in heavy seas northwest of here last night, forcing two men passengers and three Indian orphanage girls to camp ashore overnight in drenching rain.

Capt. John Falconer, the sixth person aboard, radioed he would remain on the leaking craft as long as the radio batteries remained alive. The accident occurred on an inlet at the entrance to Lynn Canal.

An Alaska Game Commission boat was dispatched to the scene. The wrecked boat is a thirty-two-horsepower Diesel-powered craft sixty-eight feet long.

White Spring and Humpback Salmon Hard to Get in Fraser Now

NEW WESTMINSTER, Oct. 13 (CP)—Purse seine operations in the seining areas at the mouth of the Fraser River have "seriously curtailed" catches made by gillnet fishermen in the area, Roy Anderson, Ladner, B.C., fisherman, told a Royal Commission here today.

"We gillnetters have lost the run of white spring salmon altogether, and there has been a large depletion of humpback salmon since seining first started in the Fraser mouth in 1933," Anderson said, testifying before the commission, which is inquiring into operations of fish traps and purse seine fishing.

He contended that gillnetters are forced to fish in outside waters while purse seiners are in the river mouth.

"Then when you go outside the Fraser River, you are there by the force of necessity and not by choice," Mr. Justice Gordon Sloan, commission chairman, asked.

The witness agreed that was the case. Under cross-examination by George Miller, Vancouver, business agent for the Salmon Purse Seiners' Union, Anderson said that purse seining does not appear to destroy the quality of the fish by the system of operation.

Mike Vidulich, another Ladner fisherman, also expressed a preference for gillnetting, claiming the latter made more on the average than the individual seiner.

Certain areas such as the Nass River and Namu had been "pretty well cleaned out" by seiners, Vidulich said, adding that in one season at Namu his brother had caught 100,000 pink salmon.

"Now there are scarcely any," he said. George Gunderson told of having made the biggest catch of all gillnet fishermen who operated in the Sooke area last year. He received about $385 for approximately 600 sockeye and fifty cohoes caught over a ten-day period.

Einer Larum, manager of the Kyuquot Trollers' Co-operative Association, said that from his experience as a troller on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, he was certain the Sooke area if the traps were removed.

He admitted, however, that he had never fished off Sooke and, therefore, had no personal knowledge of conditions there.

TRY TO GET MORSE BACK

Labor Department Requests Maritime Arbitrator to Continue in Position

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13 (AP)—The United States Labor Department sent a representative to see Wayne L. Morse at Eugene, Ore., today to ask Morse to return to his former position as Pacific Coast maritime arbitrator.

Morse, dean of the University of Oregon Law School, resigned earlier this week because an arbitration award was disregarded.

Secretary of Labor Perkins sent Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the United States Conciliation Service, to Eugene. He left San Francisco yesterday after a conference with Harry Bridges, C.I.O. longshoremen's negotiations committee chairman, who earlier had asked the Labor Department to try to get Morse back on the job.

The concern over Morse's resignation results from the waterfront employers' insistence that his resignation had done away with "the principle of arbitration" on the waterfront. The employers said they would not resume contract negotiations with the Longshoremen's Union until arbitration procedure was restored.

JUNK LEAVES FOR SEATTLE

Tai Ping's Skipper May Sail Craft South to Los Angeles

Tai Ping, the Chinese junk which took 113 days to cross the Pacific from Kobe to Quatino, left the Vancouver Island port at 4 o'clock yesterday morning en route to Seattle, according to information received by G. A. Yardley, collector of customs and excise for the Port of Victoria, from the customs official at Quatino.

Further details gathered by Canadian Press state that Captain Anderson, of the Tai Ping, which rode over several Pacific Ocean storms and was once chased by pirates who had to be driven off by gunfire, said he might sail the craft later down the coast to Los Angeles and possibly through the Panama Canal to New York.

Leaving Quatino, the Tai Ping was towed out of the Sound into the open Pacific by Guy Island. Captain Anderson said he would sail to the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait, where it is arranged for a Pass tug, from Seattle, with a Paramount newsreelman aboard, to meet the junk and take her in tow for the Puget Sound port.

Captain Anderson expects it will take from five to seven days to reach Seattle, depending on the weather.

Court of Appeal

Victoria Sittings

KIDD (R) vs. Stoddart (A)—The Court of Appeal dismissed this appeal yesterday by William J. Stoddart against a Supreme Court judgment awarding $1,500 to Guy Watson Kidd for loss of a diamond ring.

Mr. Justice McDonald, in the trial court, had found Stoddart converted to his own use and sold a ring that had been repawned to him by one Bellew, who received it on pawn from Kidd. Stoddart appealed, pleading he had purchased the ring and resold it in good faith.

H. W. Davey, for Kidd, claimed the ring was not sold, but repawned as an essential part of interest by Bellew to Stoddart.

In dismissing the appeal, their lordships agreed the transaction had been a pledge and Stoddart had no right to sell the ring. The court further expressed itself as satisfied with the $1,500 replacement value placed on the ring by the learned trial judge.

MAYELL (R) vs. Mayell (A)—This is an appeal from a judgment of Judge Shandley in the County Court in Victoria, awarding $25 a month to a wife separated from her husband for the maintenance of their infant son.

Mrs. Mayell, under a $60 a month from her husband as maintenance for herself, the child to stay with whichever parent it wished. The agreement said nothing about the maintenance of the child.

J. B. Clearhugh, K.C., for the appellant, Mr. Mayell, said there was an important point of law involved—could a wife sue her husband for half of the support of a child if she supports the child. Counsel claimed that at common law the father could turn his children at large on the highway without any legal responsibility. The only statutory change to this seemingly harsh rule provided that third parties could sue either husband or wife for maintaining their children, but as between husband and wife there is still no liability to contribute for the maintenance of their children.

Mr. Clearhugh contended that the learned trial judge had found, contrary to all evidence and pleading, that the father had agreed to maintain the child entirely. There was no evidence to support this finding. The appeal is continuing.

PEREMPTORY LIST

The remaining cases on the list were put on the peremptory list for Monday, as follows:

Mayell vs. Mayell (at bar). Howell vs. Green.

Warehouse Sec. Fin. Ltd. vs. Crozes Island Logging Co.

Neoda vs. Oliver.

Silver vs. Cummins.

ELKS OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED

Ald. E. W. Lee Exalted Ruler Of Duncan Lodge—C. J. McDonald Secretary

The annual installation of officers of Duncan Lodge No. 69, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, was held Thursday night in the lodge rooms. There was a large attendance of members and out-of-town visitors, every lodge in No. 2 district, with the exception of Powell River, being represented. D.D.G.E.R. W. Eastman, of Courtenay, was the installing officer, being assisted by Alex Peden, Victoria, both carrying out their duties in a most capable manner.

Alderman E. W. Lee is the new exalted ruler and C. J. McDonald was again installed as secretary. This being his fourteenth year. An interesting feature was the installation of C. F. Davie, K.C., former speaker of the Legislature, as historian, C. Vaughan, Vancouver, acting as installing officer.

At the banquet which followed, Grand Inner Guard H. Peile presided and gave an inspiring and instructive address in opening the banquet programme.

The progress that Duncan Elks have made in the last few years is shown by the fact that they are now the seventh largest lodge in the Dominion. Their community work is well known and was very favorably commented upon by Mayor James Greig, a banquet guest.

A large delegation from Victoria, headed by P. C. Payne, attended the ceremony.

EXPLAINS AIM OF COMMITTEE

Dr. G. F. Davidson Speaks On Civilian Protection to U.B.C. Graduates

The Victoria branch of the alumni association of the University of British Columbia listened to an interesting outline of the purpose and functions of the recently organized civilian protection committee, given by Dr. G. F. Davidson, at the annual meeting held last night in Spencer's dining room.

Dr. Davidson listed the three primary purposes of the committee as the protection of the civilian population against the after effects of enemy action; sabotage, and accidents in war industrial activities. A secondary purpose, but a very important purpose, he said, was to imbue the population with the sense that every effort was being made to minimize possible hazards, in short, to take anti-panic precautions.

He explained the organization of the committee, which calls for municipal and technical representatives from Greater Victoria, and illustrated in what manner the committee would function on given occasions.

Referring President Dr. J. F. Walker acted as chairman and reports on the work of the association during the year were given. Four executive meetings and three general meetings had been held, it was reported.

Mrs. Ross Napier was elected president for the coming year, and Harry Dee, vice-president. Other officers elected were: Honorary president, Hon. Dr. H. E. Young; membership secretary, Mrs. C. M. Leuder; recording secretary, H. Hickman; treasurer, E. G. Hart; executive members, Miss E. Cantwell, Mrs. K. McAllister and Dr. J. S. Stevenson.

The alumni decided to form a committee to explore the feasibility of establishing an officers' training corps in Victoria, similar to that of the C.O.T.C. unit attached to the university in Vancouver.

Germany is consulting Russia about the possibility of joint action against the Allies now that Great Britain and France have refused to listen to Herr Hitler's peace terms. In the confused state of European affairs, and because brute force, bad faith, injustice and oppression are rife, it is impossible to predict Russia's future course of action. Germany has a past of mutual non-aggression with the Soviet Union, but there is nothing in that agreement whereby Russia could be invoked because of the present situation. No doubt all the diplomatic wiles of Berlin are being brought to bear on Moscow to persuade Russia to engage, or to threaten to engage in the war, in the hope that such action will compel the Allies to reconsider the Hitler peace terms. The German ruler has not yet given up hopes of peace. He wants breaching time to turn his attention to developments in Eastern Europe where Russia continues to extend the aegis of her influence. He has had evidence that the war he has started is not popular with his civilian population.

Censorship, and the character of matter emanating from "ministries of information" leave the situation in Europe a blurred picture. Possibly this is because no one, save dictators themselves, knows what lies behind and ahead of their purposes. How far Russian diplomacy, backed by armed force, is going in the direction of dominating the situation in Eastern Europe is unknown. There has been no statement of Russia's aims in power politics. It still remains doubtful where Turkey stands. The fate of the Balkan States is in the balance. Russia has erected a bulwark against German aggression, but what her own purposes are in that quarter of Europe is known only at the Kremlin.

Berlin is now seeking the active participation of Russia in the campaign against France and Great Britain. Were it obtained it would only be forthcoming in a limited sense. It is unlikely that Russia, for instance, would agree to send her Red Army to the Western Front. She is too suspicious to risk an armed Germany in the rear of Soviet forces engaged in war. What she could promise Germany, if so inclined, is to take up the war in the Middle East and thus divert a part of the Anglo-French attention from the main theatre of operations.

Russia remains the unknown quantity in the European situation. Until she sent her armed might into Poland, following German aggression in that State, it was not known that she had any territorial ambitions under a Communist regime. Now it appears that she has such ambitions, and that they may become of an insatiable variety. The extension of her sphere of influence in the Baltic States challenges the position of Germany, and yet there is a Soviet-German Pact which is supposed to satisfy both parties to it, and which has been successful so far in preventing Russia from allying herself with the Allied Powers. It is purely a matter of speculation as to whether Russia will engage in the war. She will if German blandishments prevail. She will not if Moscow is assured that she can gain her ends otherwise. What those ends are constitute a mystery in the international situation, but they have developed sufficiently to forecast a new balance of power in Europe arising out of the present struggle, whatever may be the course pursued by Russia during the next few years.

AMERICAN OPINION

The war has now been going on for several weeks, and opinion concerning the merits of the conflict has been forming throughout the world. It is natural enough that countries politically organized upon democratic lines should be on the side of Great Britain and France, Belgium, the Netherlands, the Scandinavian nations, and a good many South American countries are on the right side. Sentiment in the United States, naturally, is strongly and openly on the side of the Allies.

The Americans are approaching a decision regarding the arms embargo. The debate on this question has revealed a considerable variety of opinion. It would be difficult to define accurately all these opinions, because they shade gradually into one another. The nation as a whole seems to have agreed upon one point, namely, that every effort must be made to keep the country out of war. Wide differences of opinion, however, have arisen as to the best means of achieving this end. Some take a frankly business interest in the matter and profess to think that, in spite of all that can be done, the country will ultimately be drawn in, perhaps by the irresistible influence of a growing conviction as to the soundness of the Allied cause, perhaps because if the embargo is lifted the trade in arms and munitions will grow to such proportions that in order to prevent a possible slump in business and a consequent financial crisis it will be necessary to furnish financial assistance and, ultimately, military assistance to the Allies.

Some Americans think and say that Great Britain and France are today fighting America's battle as well as their own. They point out that it took the Americans three years to realize that the Great War was really theirs, and that they got into it as soon as they realized their danger. A good many Americans are well aware of the fact that when America entered the Great War in 1917 she went in against Germany had committed acts of war against her and endangered the peace and safety of the republic. Some have forgotten this feature of the case and cherish the mistaken notion that the American entry into the war was a piece of romantic idealism and nothing else. While a certain number of people in the United States are honestly of opinion that their country, for its own safety, should enter the war at once, others think that Great Britain and France can be trusted to finish the job by themselves.

On the other side of the line there is some talk about "propaganda." Many Americans exhibit much nervousness about it. They profess to believe that British and French propaganda drew them into the Great War. What does this nervousness betoken? It suggests, for one thing, that some Americans are troubled in their minds as to what is their duty. They have an uneasy feeling about the future of free governments. The uneasiness they feel may be due to a bad conscience. The man who wants to keep out of the war at all costs protests too much. He is insistent in arguing that America's wisest and most prudent course, her true interest, is to keep out. He marshals his arguments with great apparent confidence. He says these arguments are irrefutable, but seemingly he is rather afraid that they will not prevail with his fellow-countrymen. He warns them not to listen to the arguments of the other side. He assures them that what he tells them is the pure, unadulterated truth of the matter, and that what other people say is "propaganda" of the most subtle and dangerous character.

DELAYED MAILS

The English mail to Canada and the Canadian mail to the United Kingdom are now subject to delays that recall the days when their carriage was by sailing ship. There are two reasons only that can be conceived to account for the interruption of a regular mail service both ways. One is a lack of mail-carrying tonnage, because ships may have been diverted for other purposes. The second is the censorship imposed in Great Britain and an inadequate staff to handle correspondence with dispatch. That censorship, be it stated, applies to such harmless matter as advertising circulars, press clippings, in fact everything, although the original understanding was that mail matter within the British Empire would be exempt.

So far as Canada is concerned, there has been no official explanation forthcoming from any quarter as to the reason for what appears to be unreasonable delay in the carriage of mails. Surely censorship does not consider it one of its duties to remain silent on a subject of this kind. There is a large exchange of mail between Canada and the United Kingdom, yet despite air mail carrying services, delays that seem altogether unwarranted are occurring, and an explanation of these is in order. These delays are interfering with business; they are causing anxiety in many homes throughout the land. Is it a case in wartime that mails must just muddle through any old way?

COMMANDING THE FIRST DIVISION

Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, who has been appointed Inspector-General of units, First Canadian Division, will command that Division when its units are assembled. He is an artillery man, who has had experience in organization work as Chief of Staff at Ottawa for six years. He has been described as "the scientist in war and the mathematician in khaki." Between periods of military service he devotes himself to test tubes and calculations. What is important in the responsibilities with which he will soon be invested is that he knows his guns and believes in mechanization, being assured that war as now devised to be a conflict between machines. Viewed from any angle, the appointment of Major-General McNaughton to the command of the First Division was logical. He is fifty-two years old, and has the appearance of a professional man rather than a soldier. He is of the type that inspires trust and loyalty, and that is an asset where leadership is to get the best results. His appointment has elicited praise from all over the Dominion.

M. Molotoff says that "the Red Army will carry out its great mission of emancipation with glory." To this The Manchester Guardian replies that such language "produces a creepy-crawly sensation down the spine. It is not that knifing anyone in the back is exactly unheard of in criminal affairs, either personal or national, but an attempt to link the process up with freedom and glory makes one feel that neither of those two terms should ever be used again by anyone who retains any normal instinct of self-respect."

Note and Comment

By SANDHAM GRAVES

Though it is probably a waste of time in war days, someone ought to take the Nazi regime aside and explain to it the fundamental error it is making with respect to the British race and character, which, requiring 1,000 years to develop, are not going to be blown down now by either threats or words. As a salesman of champagne and other things, perhaps Mr. Ribbentrop could undertake the task. At all events, somebody should.

To begin with, the British are a stubborn race of people, who have been known to defend even their own dung hills until there were no hills left. They have been assisted in this obsolete, backward and unreflexive characteristic by the stubbornness of the Scot, the bull-headed obstinacy of the English, and the complete mulishness of the Irish (of which this column is proud to make one). When there is added to that, as added there must be, the tenacity of the Welsh, there is forged a national character for stubbornness which has no exact equal in the world.

To continue, the British are a self-indulgent race of people. They have been known to defend even their own dung hills until there were no hills left. They have been assisted in this obsolete, backward and unreflexive characteristic by the stubbornness of the Scot, the bull-headed obstinacy of the English, and the complete mulishness of the Irish (of which this column is proud to make one). When there is added to that, as added there must be, the tenacity of the Welsh, there is forged a national character for stubbornness which has no exact equal in the world.

Arising perhaps out of the long past, when there were so many liars about that no man could tell whom to believe, the British have set a totally insular and disproportionate set of values upon honor, fair play and a man's given word. A man without honor is a man outside the pale. Fair play is something that must be accorded to everyone, even to the devil himself. A man's word is so sacred, that once broken the man himself is said not to exist any longer. The British, with characteristic stubbornness, have applied the same beliefs to everyone, even to the child, but there it is. Insular is the word, not insolent.

There is yet another characteristic of the British that is totally unaccountable, but never for one moment absent from the race: in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one. British Liberals, British Conservatives, British Socialists are totally incapable of fighting each other when the life is at stake. They are all for peace, but they are in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one. British Liberals, British Conservatives, British Socialists are totally incapable of fighting each other when the life is at stake. They are all for peace, but they are in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one.

There is, as you can see, no explaining these things. They respond to no law that has ever been put on the statute books. They upset and transgress most of the known laws of man and of nations. They operate on a basis of complete lawlessness. But they are in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one. British Liberals, British Conservatives, British Socialists are totally incapable of fighting each other when the life is at stake. They are all for peace, but they are in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one.

Summing it up, one could say that anyone could get along well enough with the British race and character if he remembers that the British are a stubborn, self-indulgent, unaccountable, but never for one moment absent from the race: in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one. British Liberals, British Conservatives, British Socialists are totally incapable of fighting each other when the life is at stake. They are all for peace, but they are in a jam or a scrimmage they pull together, as one.

Civil Servants to Be Sure of Jobs

OTTAWA, Oct. 13 (CP).—An order in council has been passed providing that civil servants enlisting in any branch of His Majesty's service for the duration of the war are to be given leave of absence without pay and their positions held open for them when they return to civil life.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

From The Daily Colonist of October 14, 1889.

A Cedar Pavement—The Seattle Electric Railway has called for bids for 60,000 feet of cedar blocks to be used as pavement between the rails of their line. The blocks are set upon their ends on a level with the surface of the streets. This sort of pavement is used extensively in Eastern cities. It is found to be more durable than asphalt, as well as being more serviceable for heavy traffic. It is thought that the pavement will last for twenty years. The work will be begun in two weeks, and will be completed by December 20.

Provincial University—A meeting of those interested in the establishment of a provincial university in Victoria was held yesterday afternoon in the City Hall, Mayor Grant presiding, and all the city clergy and a large number of prominent citizens being present. A deputation was appointed to wait upon those who have offered to donate a site for the proposed institute. The meeting adjourned for one week, to again meet in the same place.

A FAN Trip—The steamer Olympian left her wharf in this city at the usual hour yesterday morning, went to Seattle, where she received the North Pacific passengers, and returned to Victoria by steamer. The North Pacific was detained at Seattle for inspection.

RED TRIANGLE WORK PLANNED

Y.M.C.A. Committee to Entertain Soldiers and Sailors in Wartime

Further plans for the entertainment of soldiers and sailors stationed in and near Victoria in wartime were discussed at a largely attended meeting of the Y.M.C.A. committee appointed for that purpose. The meeting, presided over by W. T. Straith, M.P.P., decided to adopt the name, Red Triangle committee, for its activities.

Advice was received from R. S. Hoeking, Toronto, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., that a national policy for Y.M.C.A. war work had been prepared and submitted to the Minister of National Defence. The association also had been advised by the minister of the appointment of Brigadier-General Proctor, Vancouver, as director of soldiers' auxiliary services, covering all branches of the service.

TRANSPORT ARRANGED

Appreciation of the facilities offered by the Y.M.C.A. in Victoria was expressed in a letter received from Lieut. John T. Woolsey, adjutant of the 5th (B.C.) Coast Brigade, who stated that transportation for the men in the forts and from the Y.M.C.A. had been arranged; in addition, transportation would be available to collect parcels left at the Y.M.C.A. Building for the men in the forts.

It was reported that naval authorities at Esquimalt had informed the association that the navy would be glad to receive gifts of magazines and games, and visits from concert parties, as soon as accommodation could be arranged for them.

Two committees were appointed to collect magazines and arrange concerts for the navy and army. An offer of assistance was received from the Overseas League, and it was decided to request the league to appoint representatives to these two committees.

Old Landmark at Koksilah Shortly Will Be Removed

Condemned as a fire hazard, the old Koksilah Hotel, a landmark on the Island Highway for some fifty-two years, will shortly disappear. Workmen are now tearing down the weather-beaten walls, and in a few days nothing will remain of a place half a century ago.

The old hotel was built by William Stone Marshall. In those days it was extensively used by travelers, who found it conveniently situated for an over-night stay. But as the roads improved, travelers were able to make longer journeys, and in time the hotel ceased to be a community centre. Nearly twenty years ago it was closed as a hotel.

Among those who knew the old building well in its better days was Robert W. Service, who at one time carried the mail between the store at Cornfield, now a seed farm, and the then thriving railway depot at Koksilah.

They're teaching young peasant women to drive tractors in Russia, but poor pedestrian won't even be safe in the fields.

Her Excellency Says a Sense of Humor Needed

MONTREAL, Oct. 13 (C.P.).—Nothing can be gained by a long face, Lady Tweedsmuir said today as she urged women, in an address before the Women's Canadian Club, to retain their sense of humor if they want to keep up civilian morale in time of war.

Discounting indulgence in "arm-chair strategy," she said: "Remember, the Allied generals have probably thought of all these things for themselves."

History showed that civilization survived many catastrophes and Lady Tweedsmuir did not think that predictions of the end of civilization because of the war would be fulfilled.

"We live in a changing world," she said. "After the war is over, cannot we try to make a better world, try to remove the causes of war, get rid of the poverty and misery, and with intelligence and good will try to make the world a better place in which children may grow up?"

Referring to her Prairie library, she said she would continue this work, for "never was there more need in lonely places for good books and good newspapers."

Garments Are Completed by Solarium W.A.

A well-attended meeting of the Solarium W.A. was held on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Muford presiding. Miss Ransome, who is in charge of linen and clothing supplies at the Solarium, was welcomed, and she discussed the question of winter clothing necessities and was able to give much helpful information in regard to the type of garments most useful.

The knitting convenor, Mrs. Wise, reported that during the month twenty-eight vests, four pairs of pullovers and two sweaters had been turned in by Mrs. Reid's knitting circle, the Florence Nightingale Chapter, I.O.D.E., Mrs. Davenport and Mrs. Mallek. Two and a half dozen tunics have been cut out and are ready for making. A short discussion on activities for November took place.

St. Mary's W.A.
St. Mary's Senior W.A. met on Thursday, the first vice-president, Mrs. W. J. Goepel, in the chair, and forty-seven members being present. Mrs. D. M. Duncan gave a short talk on the missionary work of Bishop Horden at Moose Factory, from 1851 to the turn of the century. Miss Struthers Describes Work in Mission Field

Centennial W.M.S. held its Autumn thanksgiving service on Wednesday. The president, Mrs. Elder, led the devotional period, assisted by Mrs. S. Howard and Mrs. A. H. Rogers.

The new study book, India's "Moving Millions," was introduced by Mrs. J. D. Wilson, dressed in East Indian costume. After reports and other business, Miss Struthers, the guest speaker, addressed the meeting.

She has spent three years in China, first visiting the mission centres of the United Church in North China, and then was asked to help with mission work at Nanking and Shanghai.

She first pictured the great suffering, sorrow and needs of the thousands of flood refugees and war refugees in different parts of China, as she saw them. She told of a visit to a village home where income sticks were being made by the hundreds for idolatry worship, and then she gave a picture of a religious fair in North Honan, where, in two weeks' time, 70,000 or more people bowed before the hundreds of idols, seeking for peace and help—and finding none, for their gods are made of wood and stone. In contrast to that was the note of thanksgiving for what the missionaries have done and are doing in the hospitals, schools and refuge camps.

One of the notes for thanksgiving was the work carried on by the Chinese Government. One phase of its work has been the educational programme. Realizing that only one-fifth of the population can read or write, they prepared in 1918 the phonetic script, a simplified form of the Chinese character, and this script was being taught in all their schools in the cities and larger centres, also in many rural districts. Many of the missionaries were using it in their classes. Instead of having to memorize four thousand to five thousand characters in order to read the Chinese Bible, the Bible societies in China were now printing the Bible in the Chinese character and the phonetic script, which has only thirty-seven signs or characters. The Bible has been printed as far as the epistles, and the work is being carried on, said Miss Struthers, in conclusion.

Making of Will Explained To Liberal Women's Forum

W. T. Straith, M.P.P., Gives Practical Information, Emphasizing Importance of Preparing Documents Dealing With Property After Death

A few basic facts concerning wills, the making of wills, the importance of making wills, and succession and probate duties, were given by W. T. Straith, M.P.P., to the Liberal Women's Forum at the society's regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon.

At the very outset, Mr. Straith emphasized that while highly important, the making of a will—which was "only a document by which a person dealt with his property after his death"—should not inspire any unhappy forebodings, nor did it mean that a person ceased to have control of his property while still living. A will "spoke from the dead," and had no legal effect until the death of the person who made it. After making a will, a person was still quite at liberty to deal with his property as he wished. Some people seemed to have a feeling that making a will hastened death. On the contrary, the speaker thought, the fact of having made a will should help to prolong life by disposing of another worry.

A will determined who took one's property after death. In the absence of a will, a wife inherited her husband's property up to $20,000. Anything over that went to the husband's relatives.

The cost of making a will varied from $3 to $5. The making of a will was fairly simple, but should be done by someone who understood how to make a will. The straightening out of a badly-made will was not only costly, but often brought disharmony into families.

Wills should be signed, and should be witnessed by two persons, neither of whom should be mentioned in the will.

SUCCESSION DUTIES

Succession duties and probate duties were explained. Wills were subject to both. Estate going to wife and children was exempt from probate duty, that to other relatives was subject to 1 per cent duty, that to a stranger to 5 per cent duty. Succession duty was payable by the person succeeding to the property, but again widow and children inheriting were exempt up to $20,000. Insurance up to $20,000 was exempt from succession duty by widow and children. Charitable bequests were exempt from succession duties. Husbands had to pay probate duty of 1 per cent on all estate left them by their wives. Where husband and wife were joint owners of property, the survivor inherited. But where others were joint owners of estate, the term "joint tenants" should be used to secure the property for the surviving owner. Otherwise the property would pass on the death of either to the personal estate of the deceased. Dividend-paying properties would rank as a joint bank account.

In answer to a question, Mr. Straith stated that estates might be subject to multiple succession duties, if a person owning property in Saskatchewan and Ontario died in British Columbia, the will, probated in British Columbia, would be subject to succession duties in all three provinces.

"If lawyers wanted to make money they would prefer that people made no wills, as there is more money to be made in winding up an estate."

Democratic Council Holds First Meeting

To aid the cause of democracy and freedom of conscience, a council has been organized in Victoria. The first meeting of this organization will be held at the Friends' Meeting House, 1829 Fern Street, on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Organizations are invited to send two delegates. The "Democratic Rights Movement" advocates the maintenance of the freedom of speech, freedom of assembly and freedom of conscience during the war period. The programme includes a campaign to minimize hatred of the German peoples and aims to work towards a fairer peace treaty than the Treaty of Versailles. The council will undertake an investigation of the possibilities of service of a strictly impartial nature for the relief of suffering.

Chul Body Abuses

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

STUDY CAREFULLY THE SCHOOL HEALTH REPORT

In most cities and towns the school children undergo a physical examination at the beginning of school term. Parents receive a report of the child's condition as provided for, and the assurance given that the child of today will be a vigorous adult tomorrow. The first or baby teeth should not be neglected just because they have to come out anyway to make room for the permanent set. Should the school health report state that there is any defect of sight or hearing, the family physician should be consulted at once. A youngster who cannot see the blackboard clearly or who does not hear the teacher distinctly may be considered slow or stupid and an inferiority complex may be established. Sometimes tonsils and adenoids, by infection or obstruction, can interfere with sight and hearing. This may or may not be serious, depending upon whether the underweight is a family characteristic, the child being really strong and wiry, or due to the fact that the youngster does not get enough rest, hurries his eating, or eats the wrong kinds of food. There is, occasionally, a youngster who is greatly overweight—always a chubby child—whose overweight is due to gland disturbance. These very fat youngsters need special attention, especially as they approach puberty (twelve to sixteen years of age). Any curvature of the spine reported by the school health authorities should be corrected at once, as correction may be difficult or require surgery later. The removal of infected tonsils should prevent rheumatism and possible heart disease, removal or preservation of teeth help growth, development and appearance, a straightened spine prevent ill health and embarrassment. Parents should welcome these physical reports. This is well-spent, taxes.

Famous Edmonton Team to Have New Faces on Line-Up

Grads Will Have New Personnel Built Around Etta Dann, Sophie Brown and Jean Williamson This Winter—Team Celebrates Twenty-Fifth Birthday Party—Many Attend

EDMONTON, Oct. 13 (CP)—A new Edmonton Grads basketball team to be built this winter around three veterans—Captain Etta Dann, Sophie Brown and Jean Williamson—was forecast tonight by Coach J. Percy Page at Grads' twenty-fifth birthday party.

As rookies and old Grads who had played for the team in the past twenty-four years listened intently, the white-haired mentor unfolded his plan. Around the veterans he hopes to fashion a new team. Early next winter they will play a test game against an outside team, and on their performance in that game their future will depend.

It meets with his satisfaction, said the man who formed the team at MacDougall Commercial High School in 1914. Grads probably will defend their Canadian title next Spring and accept challenges from Chicago and Pittsburgh for the Underwood Women's International Basketball Trophy. The new team must have at least an even chance of success.

"Our chief difficulty is not a matter of finances, but of replacements," Page said. "Frankly, the girls coming up are not in the same class as those we are losing, and whether or not I can get a high-class team ready by next Spring is the big problem of the moment."

FOUR RETIRED

During the last year ten players saw service in Grads uniforms. Four veterans have retired—Captain Noel MacDonald, Mabel Munton, Helen Northup and Muriel "Babe" Daniel.

Of three rookies, Kay MacRitchie and Winnie Gallen are still with the team.

Coach Page said he was well aware of the reputation and tradition Grads had built in winning all but nineteen of their 508 official games. He knew too that many people would regard it as a calamity if Grads should lose any of their titles through default when only half a year remains to complete the quarter century.

"However," he concluded, "I have no intention of letting our supporters down. We'll either have a good team or none at all."

Coach Page promised that next year Grads would hold their party at its proper date in June, instead of in the Fall, and that all former members of Grads teams would be invited here for the festivities. The players of the first Grads team of 1914 have all retired. Grads of 1915 have all first Grads team and none of them was present, but most of the members of the 1922 team—the one that made Grads nationally and internationally famous—were there.

Presentations were made to the three players newly married—Noel MacDonald, Mabel Munton and Betty Ross. MacDonald and Munton, who revealed only this week they had been married earlier this Fall, received an extra present—a shower of confetti.

Credit was paid to the Grads and their coach by L. Y. Cairns in proposing the toast to the team, and by George Parney, William Tait and Clarence Campbell in making the presentations.

RUGGERS TO START PLAY HERE NOV. 11

First Match of Season in The City Planned for Armistice Day

Plans for the opening of the Rugby season were dealt with at an executive meeting of the Victoria Rugby Union at a meeting yesterday evening in The Colonist board room. Officials decided to start the 1939-40 season on Armistice Day, November 11, with a possible inter-city match holding the spotlight.

In past seasons the November 11 match has always been between fifteen flying the colors of the Army and Navy, but due to the war crisis this year it is impossible to get the soldiers and sailors into action. In all probability the James Bay squad, winners of the Barnard Cup last season, will oppose the Vancouver Rowing Club. Definite plans for this encounter will be announced by the executive later.

It was definitely decided to have Victoria competing for the McKeechle Cup again this year. The executive will approach the British Columbia Rugby Union for the dates of the cup matches to be held here and on the Mainland. Victoria usually plays their first home game in the series on Boxing Day, December 26. The local team is expected to open in Vancouver on November 25.

A committee of team managers, including Campbell Forbes, Wanderers, Bob Wallace, Victoria College, and Bob McInnes, James Bay, will report back to the executive at next Tuesday's meeting on the number of squads that will compete in the league this season.

MRS. LINDSAY GOLF WINNER

Defeats Mrs. Pearce in Final For "B" Class Honors At Uplands

Mrs. A. C. Lindsay is the new "B" class champion of the Uplands Golf Club. Yesterday afternoon in the eighteen-hole final she scored a hard-fought 2 and 1 decision over Mrs. C. Pearce. The latter was leading at the halfway distance, but the eventual winner squared the net early on the back stretch and then went on to rain victory on the seventeenth green. Mrs. E. Jackson was the referee.

Mrs. D. Fletcher captured first flight honors by scoring an easy 7 and 6 victory over Mrs. F. B. Storer, while the second flight final was played off this morning on the semi-final, Mrs. J. R. Hibberdson defeated Mrs. M. Hamblay, 5 and 3, and Mrs. R. Ard came through against Mrs. W. Harker, 3 and 2.

Following the matches, Mrs. H. A. Blakey presented the various prizes to the winners and runners-up. A large number of members attended the presentations and then partook of afternoon tea.

CRIME TEARS ON CAROL WELLS

CHAPTER XVIII

As Yvette walked across the lawn and through the garden, she pondered over the not very satisfactory situation in which she found herself. She knew, of course, who Tom had in mind—it must be Anita, for no one could suspect demure little Laura Lee of anything in the nature of a practical joke.

She wished Hetty hadn't said that she saw her, for she didn't. At three o'clock that morning she was in bed and asleep, and if anybody went into the ivy arbor at that time it was not Yvette Verne.

She had never been in the ivy arbor at all. But she was going there now. She walked briskly toward it, and just as she entered, she turned her head to look, and she was almost sure she saw Hetty's skirt flutter round the corner of the house.

Not was she mistaken. Hetty ran breathlessly to where Elkanah, her husband was, and cried out:

"She's gone there again, Elk! She's just gone into the ivy arbor! Chase right over there and see what she's doing!"

"Lawks, Hetty, she can't be doing no harm."

"Don't stop to heckle me, run, now."

So Elkanah shambled along, and when he reached the arbor there was no one there. He didn't care much, but he thought it was queer. Where had the girl gone? If she had been going into the arbor when Hetty saw her, she couldn't have popped out of sight entirely while he was crossing the lawn. For the arbor was in full view all the time he was approaching it. And there was but the one door.

He looked inside. It was round, and plainly built; there were openings for windows, but no sashes or blinds. A seat went all round, and there was no other furniture. Miss Verne could have climbed out through a window, perhaps, but there would surely be broken ivy sprays to mark her exit, and why would she do such a thing anyhow?

With a horrible feeling of foreboding, Elkanah began to wonder if Hetty was getting a habit of "seeing things." Elkanah set himself to a diligent search for Miss Verne, in hopes of dispersing the trouble before it came.

He went round behind the arbor. There was a row of grand old oaks between him and the further spread lawn, but the lowest branches sprang from high up the trunks, and he had a clear view beneath them. If Yvette Verne had climbed out a back window and sped across the wide stretches of lawn, she could not get out of his sight during his trip from the house to the arbor.

And so, with a sinking heart, he decided that his wife's mind had failed in some way.

He dragged himself back to tell her his news, and found her entirely sane, and agree to hear about Miss Verne. And when he told her she had imagined seeing Miss Verne, her scolding was almost harder to bear than the thought of her insanity.

And then, in a doleful voice, Hetty began to sing:

"When the woes of life o'ertake me,
Friends desert and fools annoy—
Elkanah could bear no more, and he walked out.

Yvette Verne, feeling pretty sure that the Gersons were safe in the house, for a time, climbed down from the big oak tree and swung to the ground from its lowest limb. She went into the ivy arbor and scanned the green-leaved walls. It was a marvelous growth, the perfection of care and training giving the same results both inside and out. At last she found what she was looking for.

A packet of letters in ordinary-sized envelopes held together by a rubber band.

"Might have wrapped 'em up," she thought, putting the parcel in an inside pocket of her tweed coat, and starting back to the house.

She arrived in time to join the cocktail service, and entertained the party with the tale of her adventure.

"I went out for a breath of fresh air," she said, "and as, notwithstanding reports to the contrary, I had never been in the ivy arbor, I thought I'd take a look at the inside."

"Yes, Hetty said she saw you go in," Cornelia said.

"Naturally," returned Yvette, "the blessed woman watched over me like a warder. Well, I got inside, and I think it is lovely. And I saw Elkanah leaning across the lawn, and some imp of depravity put it in my heart to give Elky a jolt. So I went out through a back window, and when Elkanah arrived there was nobody home. It was funny to see the look on his face! It was more than surprise. It was something very like fear. I do believe he thinks I am in league with the powers of darkness."

"Where did you go?" asked Harley Madison, smiling at her.

"I climbed one of the big oak trees. You know Boscobel Oak, where Charles the Second hid, and every year since they celebrate his birthday there. I'd like to have mine celebrated here."

"You shall," declared Harley. "If you haven't a birthday near by, I'll lend you mine. It will be here next week."

"But I won't."

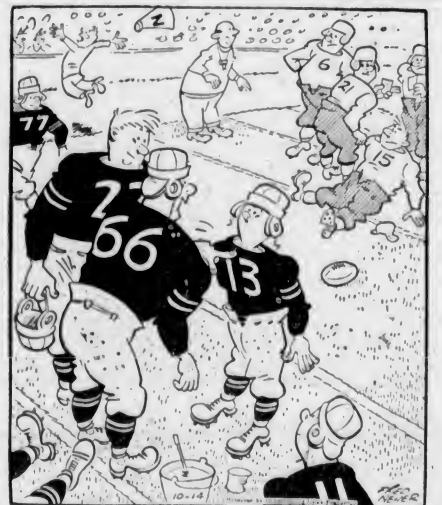

"Oh, yes, you will. You'll have to stay now until you convince the Gersons that you're a proper human being."
